

DIANNA CALEY

Dianna Caley is a Partner at the Bellevue, Washington office of Wong Fleming. Wong Fleming is one of the largest minority owned law firms in the nation. Ms. Caley began her career representing the Colville Confederated Tribes in Grand Coulee, Washington. She was subsequently commissioned by the United States Army. As an attorney for the Army, Ms. Caley was responsible for advising commanders regarding compliance with Army, State and Federal regulations as well as ensuring that each unit within the specific branch was in compliance with the Army environmental regulations. During her tenure she also handled claims against the army and some criminal prosecutions.

After leaving the Army she spent a year working for the Department of Labor as an investigator before beginning her own practice. In 2003 she and Ms. Dehkhoda Steele formed a partnership to practice law. They were joined a year later by Mr. Shahzad Qadri. In 2011 her firm joined Wong Fleming as the Washington branch of this national law firm.

Ms. Caley is an experienced litigator and has litigated preference and discharge actions in the bankruptcy court and a variety of action in both superior and federal court in Washington..

Ms. Caley, along with her civil law practice, has a growing bankruptcy practice. The majority of her clients are debtors, but she has a growing creditor practice where she effectively represents creditors, and corporations in all aspects of Bankruptcy needs.

Ms. Caley is also frequently called upon to serve as an arbitrator by the Courts and mediates civil matters a few times a year. She received a certificate in mediation while attending law school.

EXPERIENCE

- Litigation
- Bankruptcy
- ADR

EDUCATION

- J.D., City University New York (1993)
- B.A., Evergreen State College (1990)